

→ MANNHEIM, GERMANY - March, 1945

This was taken just after we had come across the Rhine into Mannheim. The truck up ahead is about to turn into what used to be a beautiful wide boulevard. (You can see all the way down it from the other end to the big building part of which is shown at right of picture.)

(Notice the streetcar stalled in the middle of the street in background. They were standing around all over town.)