CLAY, LUCIUS DuBIGNON, 1897-1978. PAPERS, 1943 (1950-1978). 33 boxes.

Biographical Sketch

Lucius D. Clay was born in Marietta, Georgia, on April 23, 1897. His father, Alexander Stephens Clay, was a United States Senator from Georgia for 14 years and young Clay served as a Senate page for a time. He was related to Kentucky's famous Henry Clay.

On graduating from West Point, on June 12, 1918, as a second lieutenant of engineers, he was simultaneously promoted to first lieutenant and captain because of war-caused shortages of officers. On September 21 of that same year, Clay was married to Marjorie McKeown. They had two sons, General Lucius D. Clay, Jr., United States Air Force, Retired, and Major General Frank B. Clay, United States Army, Retired.

In the years before World War II, Clay served in the engineers, both in the United States and abroad. During World War II, Clay was briefly in charge of the ports in France in mid-1944 after the Allied invasion. For most of the war, however, General Clay served as Director of Material for the Army and as Deputy Director for War Mobilization and Reconversion under James F. Byrnes.

In 1945, immediately after the war, General Clay was made Deputy Military Governor to General Eisenhower for the United States Zone of Germany. In 1947, he became the United States Military Governor and the Commander-in-Chief of U.S. Forces in Europe. He held this position during the Berlin Blockade and Airlift.

General Clay retired from the Army on May 31, 1949, and in April, 1950, became Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer of Continental Can Company, Inc. Also in 1950, he wrote the book, Decision in Germany. He retired from Continental Can on December 31, 1962, and on February 1, 1963, he became a Senior Partner in Lehman Brothers investment banking house until his retirement on October 1, 1973.

While Clay was with the Continental Can Company, he returned to Washington on leave of absence during the Korean War to help organize the Office of Defense Mobilization. In 1954, he was appointed by General Eisenhower to serve as Chairman of the President's Advisory Committee on a National Highway Program. From August 1961 to May 1962, Clay, again on leave of absence from the Continental Can Company, became Personal Representative of President John F. Kennedy, with the rank of Ambassador, in Berlin during the critical period following the construction of the wall. Early in 1963, President Kennedy appointed General Clay to head a committee to study the nation's foreign aid program.

General Clay was Chairman of the Board of Radio Free Europe, Inc., until 1975. He was an Honorary Trustee of the Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York and of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama. He was an Honorary Member of the Business Council in Washington, D.C.. Clay served as a member of the Board of Directors of a number of major U.S. corporations including General Motors. He was National Finance Chairman for the Republican Party from 1965 to 1968. In 1966, at the request of Mayor John V. Lindsay, Clay formed and headed a Public Development Corporation to help revitalize New York City's industry. In 1972-1973, he served as a member of the New York City Chapter Revision Commission. General Clay remained active in civic affairs after his retirement from Lehman Brothers in 1973, serving as fund raising chairman of groups such as the American Red Cross and the George C. Marshall Research Foundation. He died April 17, 1978, in Cape Cod, Massachusetts.

Among the many military decorations received by General Clay from the United States and other countries are: The Distinguished Service Medal (three times); the Legion of Merit; and the Bronze Star. He received numerous honorary degrees and other awards including the Hoover Medal of the Engineering Societies. In 1976, he received the first President's Award of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Provenance

With the exception of isolated fragments, these papers deal exclusively with General Clay's career from the time he retired from the army in 1950 to his death in 1978. (The photographs do intensively treat the period 1945-1949.) General Clay's official Army files are housed in the National Archives. A two volume selection from these papers, edited by Jean Edward Smith, has been published.

General Clay apparently reviewed his papers periodically and destroyed portions of them. Though what remains here is voluminous, it does not represent everything generated by Clay from 1950 to his death. All of these papers were kept in Clay's office at the Continental Group headquarters in New York, where he maintained an office during his retirement. Several months after his death in April 1978, the Clay family presented the papers to the George C. Marshall Research Foundation.

Scope and Content

THE PAPERS OF LUCIUS D. CLAY, 1943-(1950-1978), are arranged in five series by type of material: Correspondence; Articles, Interviews and Statements; Speeches; Office Records; and Scrapbooks and Scrapbook Materials. There are also a variety of Separated Materials listed in detail at the end of this guide. This arrangement is much the same as it was when these papers were stored in General Clay's last office. Only refinements of that order were undertaken during processing.

The Correspondence (16 1/2 boxes) is easily the largest series, and it is divided into five subseries: General Correspondence; Selected Correspondence; Correspondence with Foundations, Corporations and Committees; Categorical Correspondence; and Condolences on General Clay's Death.

The General Correspondence is divided into two sub-subseries, each alphabetically arranged by correspondent. The first sub-subseries spans the years 1950-1962 -- from the time Clay joined Continental Can until the time he retired from that organization. The second sub-subseries treats the years 1963-1978 -- from the time Clay joined Lehman Brothers until his death. Very little in the way of business or government affairs is discussed in this correspondence. There are, however, prominent correspondents from the worlds of business and government represented here, including: David Laurance, and Nelson Rockefeller; Stephen Bechtel; Lewis Douglas; Ludwig Erhard; John Kenneth Galbraith; Arthur Goldberg; Henry Jackson; Jacob Javits; Henry Cabot Lodge; John McCone; Robert Moses; Robert Murphy; Lord Brian Robertson; George Romney; Harold Stassen; and William Westmoreland. Very often this correspondence involves exchanges of birthday greetings, or copies of speeches and newspaper articles sent or received.

The Selected Correspondence -- so called as it was filed neither in the general correspondence nor the categorical files -- also consists of two sub-subseries: chronologically arranged correspondence and alphabetically arranged correspondence. The chronologically arranged selected correspondence is an anomaly in these papers in that it treats the years 1945-1949. There are five folders of this material. Included here are military orders, correspondence with political leaders of Germany and the United States, and correspondence with United States military leaders. The 1949 correspondence deals almost exclusively with General Clay's return to the United States and his retirement from the Army. Though there are individual documents of especial interest, these files seem to be fragments of Clay's papers from this period and not an integral unit.

The alphabetically arranged selected correspondence, 1948-1978, consists of correspondence with prominent people from the worlds of politics, the military, business, and academia. There are also subject files on "West Germany" which include correspondence from all sorts of German citizens -- prominent and otherwise -- who wrote to Clay. The most voluminous correspondence here is that between Clay and General Eisenhower from the period 1951-1952. Clay closely advised Eisenhower on how he should go about beginning and conducting his bid for the presidency. The correspondence between Clay and Thomas E. Dewey compliments the exchanges with Eisenhower. General Clay's 1961-1962 term as Personal Representative of the President in Berlin is treated here in his correspondence with President Kennedy, Dean Rusk, and General Maxwell Taylor. There is correspondence between Clay and authors Honore Marc Catudal, John Gimbel, and Jean Edward Smith all of whom wrote about Clay and Germany. The Smith correspondence is especially interesting and lengthy. Smith had set out to do a biography of Clay, before deciding to edit Clay's post World War II papers, and, consequently, much biographical and other material concerning Clay is to be found here. (At the time that this guide is being prepared, some of the correspondence in this section of the papers is still security classified by the United States Government.)

The Correspondence with Foundations, Corporations, and Committees is arranged alphabetically and deals with the years 1950-1978. General Clay served all of these institutions in some capacity -- as an associate, board member, or some similar position. Not all of the organizations with which General Clay was associated are represented here. A list, thought to be incomplete, of corporate and private directorships of General Clay precedes this correspondence.

The categorical correspondence deals almost exclusively with the years 1951-1978; the exception is several folders under the category "awards and degrees" which treat the period 1943-1950 and the "biographical materials" which begin in 1945. The categories are included in the outline of the collection. Much of this correspondence is pro forma.

The final subseries of correspondence is the Condolences on the death of General Clay in 1978, all of which were sent to Mrs. Lucius D. Clay excepting those which are noted as having been sent to General Frank Clay. These condolences, which fill 23 folders, are arranged, as they were found, by categories of correspondents. Many political, military, and business leaders from the United States and abroad sent their condolences.

The series, ARTICLES, INTERVIEWS AND STATEMENTS (3 boxes), contain texts, drafts, and transcripts, as well as correspondence, relating to many of the statements given by General Clay during the years 1950-1977. These folders are chronologically arranged. General Clay was sent complimentary copies of books by publishers or authors, and was urged to make "quotable" comments on them. In other instances, Clay was asked for a statement in support of a cause or an organization, to be included in a printed program for an event. General Clay also gave a number of oral history interviews, and the transcripts that were sent to him for his approval are included here.

The SPEECHES, 1950-1974 (1 1/2 boxes), are divided into two subseries -- those given by Clay and those given by others. All but a few folders are in the former category. These files include drafts, reading copies, and published versions of Clay speeches, as well as correspondence concerning arrangements for giving the speeches. The folders are arranged chronologically by the date on which each speech was given. The kinds of occasions at which Clay spoke include academic lectures, commencements, business lunches and dinners, awards ceremonies, and club meetings.

The OFFICE RECORDS, 1950-1977 (6 1/2 boxes), contain two elements: an Address Card File and Engagement Books. The address file is, of course, arranged alphabetically by proper name, and the engagement books are arranged chronologically.

The SCRAPBOOKS AND SCRAPBOOK MATERIALS series, 1943-1978 (16 volumes and 1 flat box), consists of clippings and other memorabilia affixed in volumes. There is also a box of loose clippings. Though there are some scattered photographs in this material, volumes made up of mostly photographs -- that is photograph albums -- are kept with the photographic materials. These scrapbooks cover a variety of events and subjects from geneological information about Clay's antecedents to condolence books from the time of his death.

The SEPARATED MATERIALS include all of those elements of this collection which are stored apart from the rest for ease of access by researchers or because of special preservation needs. These materials include Photographs and Photograph Albums, Printed Materials, Audio Visual Materials, and Miscellaneous Miscellany. These materials are listed in detail in the separation record which follows the container list.

As was noted earlier, the photographic materials do, as the papers do not, extensively document Clay's immediate post-World War II service in Germany.

Presented by Mrs. Lucius D. Clay family, 1 October 1979.
