GENERAL ANDREW J. GOODPASTER

The late Andrew Goodpaster began a career in public service that lasted nearly seven decades beginning with his graduation from West Point in 1939. During WWII he commanded the 48th Engineer Combat Battalion in North Africa and Italy and served on the Joint War Plans Committee in the War Department. After receiving a Ph.D. from Princeton, General Goodpaster served as Staff Secretary to President Eisenhower, Commandant of the National War College, Deputy Commander of U.S. Forces, Vietnam and Commander-in-Chief, U.S. European Command and Supreme Allied Commander, Europe. Also he served as Superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy and on numerous boards and commissions including The Atlantic Council, The Eisenhower Institute and the Marshall Foundation, of which he was the chairman for many years.

THE ANDREW J. GOODPASTER AWARD

The Andrew J. Goodpaster Award honors the life and service of General Andrew J. Goodpaster, a longtime trustee and chairman of the Foundation, a champion of the Marshall legacy, an American hero and an extraordinary public servant. The Goodpaster Award is presented to American heroes in a variety of fields who, like General Goodpaster, have exhibited great courage, selfless service, patriotism and leadership in their lives and careers.

GENERAL JOHN P. JUMPER, USAF (RET.)
17th Chief of the U.S. Air Force and Retired CEO, Leidos

General John Jumper, USAF (Ret.), is being honored for his distinguished career in the U.S. Air Force as well as for his many contributions to national defense. Following a distinguished 39-year career, he retired in 2005 as the 17th Chief of Staff of the United States Air Force. In his four years as the senior uniformed official in America's air and space service, General Jumper led more than 700,000 men and women through the Global War of Terrorism, force modernization, and strategic transformation. Among his many assignments were commander of Air Combat Command at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, commander of U.S. Air Forces Europe and Allied Air Forces Central Europe, and senior military assistant to the Secretary of Defense. A command pilot with more than 5,000 flying hours, principally in fighter aircraft, Gen. Jumper served two tours in Southeast Asia, accumulating more than 1,400 combat hours. In June 2007 Gen. Jumper joined the Board of Directors of Science Applications International Corporation (SAIC), and in March 2012 he became CEO. He was instrumental in splitting the company into two. After the split, he remained the CEO of the company which changed its name to Leidos. Gen. Jumper retired as CEO in July 2014. Gen. Jumper earned a Bachelor of Science degree in electrical engineering from the Virginia Military Institute in 1966. Still active at his alma mater, he serves on the Institute's Board of Visitors. General Jumper and his wife Ellen live in Spotsylvania, Virginia and have three grown daughters, each of whom has served in the Air Force.

GEORGE C. MARSHALL FOUNDATION

Rare are those individuals who shape the course of world events as George C. Marshall did before, during and after World War II. The Marshall Foundation, located in Lexington, Virginia, perpetuates the legacy of General Marshall's life and leadership as Army Chief of Staff during World War II, Secretary of State (Marshall Plan) and Secretary of Defense during the Korean War by educating new generations about his role in many of the greatest events of the 20th century that influence issues affecting our nation and the world in the 21st century.

As the keeper of the flame, the Marshall Foundation preserves and communicates the remarkable story of the life and times of George C. Marshall and his contemporaries. It has become a unique, national treasure. Marshall's achievements are interpreted for the public in the Marshall Museum and through the popular Marshall Legacy Series. The Library and Archives contain more than one million documents, 2,700 maps from World Wars I and II, 900 posters from World Wars I and II, and the famous series of Marshall Plan information posters produced in Europe following World War II in a growing collection of documents, artifacts and books. Accommodating increasing interest in the research and study of this period, the Foundation has put much of this material online on its website.

Current and future generations must learn about George C. Marshall—leader, visionary, strategist, and statesman. The Foundation's challenge is to return Marshall to the public consciousness so more people, particularly young people, have an opportunity to learn from his example. He said it well years ago: "It is hard to believe that a man familiar with the history of the centuries could fail to guide his course somewhat by the lessons of the past."

We Salute You

Congratulations to General John P. Jumper, recipient of the Andrew J. Goodpaster award.
We salute your extraordinary leadership, fearless courage, and selfless dedication to the nation.
