

Learning Objectives

1. Knowledge:

Museum visitors will gain knowledge of:

- The history of the industrial production and civilian mobilization during World War II.
- The history of civilian contribution to the war effort through victory gardens, war bonds and rationing.
- George C. Marshall's involvement with the home front effort.

2. Skills:

Museum visitors will:

- Gain critical thinking and listening skills as they view and listen to the various stories of the companies and programs that supported the home front effort of World War II.
- Develop critical thinking skills as they consider the present day equivalents of industries, companies and civilian contributions to today's military efforts.
- Use critical thinking skills to evaluate how

3. Reflection:

Museum visitors will reflect on key questions presented in the exhibit, such as:

- How did industrial production increase during WWII?
- What avenues were explored to increase production and supplies?
- How did gardening and rationing effect the population?
- What was Marshall's role in these areas?
- What were the strengths and weaknesses of the civilian programs?

4. Attitudes and Values:

Museum visitors will:

- Develop a sense of what it was like to on the home front during WWII.
- Develop an appreciation for the vast amount of people and companies that contributed to the success of the US Army during World War II.